

Proclamation

WHEREAS, you are a man of integrity, kind, gentle, honest, strong, and humble in a world filled with men whose characteristics are often quite the contrary; and

WHEREAS, you have lived our years together loving, honoring, respecting, cherishing me; and

WHEREAS, you have sacrificed so much, even at times delaying dreams of your own, so we could build this life together; and

WHEREAS, you have spent moments holding me when I've cried, comforting me when I've been disappointed, made me laugh when I'd otherwise been sad; and

WHEREAS, you have shown me grace, forgiving my mistakes throughout the years; and

WHEREAS, you have overlooked so many of my faults, accepted my flaws and come to appreciate (or better yet, pardoned) my idiosyncratic ways; and

WHEREAS, you have been my closest friend, my most cherished confidant; and

WHEREAS, you have been a friend to all those in need, a reliable person whose word is his bond and whose commitments always stand the test of time; and

WHEREAS, your smile makes my heart happy, your touch makes my knees weak, your kiss makes me want to be held in your arms forever; and

WHEREAS, you pledged to be with me for better or for worse, through sickness and health, through richer or poorer; and

WHEREAS, you committed to walk this road of life with me and to never give up on our love or lose faith in our ability to create a marriage that lasts a lifetime.

NOW, THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED that I will love you all the days of my life. I will celebrate you. I will let the world know how honored I am to be your wife. On this day, I once again pledge my life to you and commit that no matter what curve balls life throws our way, I will remain by your side and we will defeat every foe and overcome any challenge together.
